

Lots of new business happening around Gordon Square

10:09 am, March 24, 2011

The already-bustling Gordon Square Arts District is getting a little busier with the addition of three new retail businesses.

Wednesday marked the official opening of Sweet Moses, a soda fountain and treat shop at 6800 Detroit Avenue, one block west of the Gordon Square Arcade.

The owner is Jeff Moreau, who's offering a turn-of-the-century soda shop experience. Sweet Moses serves homemade ice cream dishes and handmade confections. Coming soon will be peanut butter sandwiches that can be topped with options including bacon, marshmallow cream, Nutella, sliced bananas and potato chips.

In addition, two women's boutiques soon will open at the West 65th Street and Detroit Avenue intersection.

One of the businesses, Turnstyle, will sell a mix of vintage and contemporary items. The other business comes from "Project Runway" fashion designer Valerie Mayen, who is creating a "pop-up" store of her fashions next to the Capitol Theatre on West 65th Street.

PRINTED FROM: <http://www.craainscleveland.com/article/20110324/FREE/110329911&template=printart>

© 2011 Crain Communications Inc.
